

For a long time it has been known that men of other States, towns, and even nations, have discovered that Indianapolis has many charming young women; so charming indeed that to visit them has not been sufficient to satisfy them, and they have taken them away, one by one, to grace their own home circles. Probably half of the Indianapolis young women who marry are won by young men away from here. To review the list of the last few years is interesting, and yet it is not entirely complete. Who they are, and where they live, is unknown, except to acquaintances. To recount a few may not be dull reading, their maiden and married names and place of residence: Mrs. Louise Starkey Aldrich, Kalamazoo; Mrs. Kate Gresham Andrews, Chicago; Mrs. Sallie Bingham Dean, Washington, D. Bunce at Clinton. It has been with interest as well as pride that the many friends of Miss Daisy Lemon have watched her progress in her musical studies in New York. Although she has not been studying a year, she has received some exceedingly flattering offers from some of the first class concert companies on | April 4. Something unusual and partien-

soprano, but acting under advice of her teacher and musical critics and leading musicians of New York for whom she has sung, she has declined all offers of engage-ments prior to completing her musical studies. Miss Lemon's name was held in favorable mention by the May festival committee with a view of obtaining her services as one of the soloists, but fearing it would interfere too much with her studies and for reasons above mentioned negotiations were dropped.
